PROGRAMS ABROAD:

In a sharp change from last year, we have great news to report with regard to W&M study abroad programs in Latin America. The program in Morelia, Mexico, is once again up and running, and efforts are under way to establish a new program at the Universidad de La Plata, outside Buenos Aires. There is a good chance that students will be able to link time spent in Argentina with a stay at our other Southern Cone affiliate, the Universidad Austral in Valdivia, Chile. A tuition exchange program remains in place in Costa Rica, at the National University in San José. More internship possibilities are also in the works, with one program in rural Ecuador slated for May-June of this year. Students interested in intensive Spanish language study continue to populate the College's vibrant program in Cádiz, Spain, and several faculty members are probing potential university affiliations in Brazil.
