William & Mary

SPONSORED SEMESTER IN OXFORD, ENGLAND

Hertford College is one of 45 constituent colleges and halls of Oxford University and is known for its "progressive yet friendly" atmosphere and high academic standards. Hertford College is located at the heart of the medieval university opposite the Bodleian Library.

The foundation of teaching at Oxford University is a tutorial system. W&M students have the unique opportunity to study under this system, which gives individuals and pairs of students approximately 60 minutes of instruction per tutorial each week. These sessions are supplemented by lectures and seminars organized by either Hertford College tutors or Oxford University. This system allows students to explore their academic interests more deeply and develop personalized educational goals

Students will earn between 15 and 30 transfer credits depending upon the number of tutorials in which they enroll and the terms during which they are at Hertford College.

Credits will appear as transfer credit on students' William & Mary transcripts and will not be included in their GPA. Transfer credits must be pre- or post-approved.

Students may enroll in full university curriculum, with the exception of business and science courses. Students may enroll in two to four tutorials depending upon the terms studying at Hertford College.

The W&M faculty advisor for the Hertford College (University of Oxford) sponsored semester program is Professor Talbot Taylor.

The Reves Center advisor for the Hertford College (University of Oxford) sponsored semester program is Theresa Johansson.
