A Path to Involvement

Do you feel like you’re not sure where to start in deciding what organizations to join? Are you feeling overwhelmed at the sheer number of student organizations at William & Mary? Or do you have too many commitments and want help deciding which opportunities to focus on? Consider these reflection questions to help you navigate these important decisions!

Questions for Reflection

1. What do you care about? (People, places, causes, events, trends, cultures, etc.)

2. What skills, knowledge, or insights do you want to develop?

3. What energizes you or restores your well-being?

Finding Organizations Right for You

A student should join an organization that brings meaning to them—that is, an organization that connects who they are and what they value.

For a full list of recognized student organizations, visit the website for the Office of Student Leadership Development at http://www.wm.edu/leadership.

Need More Help?

Identify one organization or involvement area in each of these categories.

Something you care about and want to continue with:

Something you are interested in but have yet to try:

Something that would advance your academic or professional interests: