William & Mary steadfastly supports survivors of sexual assault. Sexual violence and sexual harassment are antithetical to our core values and mission; they damage the bonds of mutual trust and responsibility on which a learning community depends. All of us have a role to play in building the kind of culture we want at William & Mary.

President Katherine A. Rowe

This is the portal for members of the William & Mary community to learn about prevention, response protocols and support services for sexual harassment, sexual violence, and other sexual misconduct, including:

- non-consensual sexual intercourse and other forms of sexual assault
- sexual exploitation
- stalking and
- relationship violence.

The resources collected here provide information about reporting and procedures used to hold students accountable for sexual misconduct.

You will not be required to provide any personal information in order to view the content or resources within this portal.

What is consent?

Consent is clear, knowing, voluntary and ongoing agreement for sexual contact or activity. Someone who is incapacitated (for example by alcohol or drugs) or who is intimidated, threatened, or coerced cannot give valid consent. Learn more about how W&M policy defines consent.
