

EPC motions for the A&S faculty meeting of May 3, 2016

EPC presents three motions:

1. To establish a new interdisciplinary minor in Asian and Pacific Islander Studies
2. To add Classical Studies as one of the majors available to students in the WM/St Andrews Joint Degree Programme
3. To add Film Studies as one of the majors available to students in the WM/St Andrews Joint Degree Programme

1. NEW MINOR IN ASIAN AND PACIFIC ISLANDER AMERICAN STUDIES:

EPC moves that the faculty accept the proposal of a group of scholars from a number of departments and programs (see under 'Faculty Advisory Board' below) to create a new interdisciplinary minor in Asian and Pacific Islander Studies. Students will be able to fulfill the minor with courses offered in Africana Studies, American Studies, Asian and Middle Eastern Studies, Anthropology, Art History, History, MLL, Sociology, Theater, and other departments and programs. New courses will also be offered specifically designed to serve as core courses for the minor. A new prefix "APIA" will denominate courses designed for the minor and can also be used to cross-list courses from other programs and departments that count toward the minor. This proposal has the approval of the Committee on Honors and Interdisciplinary Studies, and the minor will be administered by the Charles Center.

For the catalogue:

ASIAN and PACIFIC ISLANDER AMERICAN STUDIES

Faculty Advisory Board:

Tanglao-Aguas (Director; Asian and Pacific Islander American Studies, Africana Studies, and Theatre), Braxton (Africana Studies and English), Chen (Education), Gosin (Sociology), Hamada Connolly (Anthropology), Han (History), Hui (Modern Languages & Literature), Kahn (Anthropology), Kitamura (History), Mullen (Government), Sheehi (Modern Languages & Literature), Sohoni (Sociology), Tang (Modern Languages & Literature), Thelwell (Africana Studies and History), Vose (Religious Studies), Weiss (American Studies and English), Wu (Art & Art History).

Program:

Asian Americans and Pacific Islanders are the fastest growing ethnic group in the United States. This interdisciplinary minor will provide students with the research, interpretive, and creative skills needed to examine the culture and experiences of this group. Program faculty are drawn from a variety of disciplines, making it possible to study these communities in a variety of contexts, including the broader Asian and Pacific Islander diasporas, globalization, the American Civil Rights movement, decolonization, and Third world solidarity.

Requirements for the Minor:

DECLARATION: Students may declare their intention to minor in Asian & Pacific Islander American Studies after completing any one course in the program in consultation with a faculty from the Advisory Board. Courses other than the ones listed below may be credited towards the minor after approval from the program director.

III. ADDITION OF FILM STUDIES to the ST. ANDREWS JOINT DEGREE PROGRAMME

EPC moves that the faculty accept the proposal of the St. Andrews committee to add a new major in Film Studies to the options available to students in the WM/St. Andrews Joint Degree Programme. This proposal has already been approved by the local joint programme committees at each institution, as well as by the joint committee which met here in Williamsburg two weeks ago.

The Joint Degree Program in Film Studies

The aims and objectives of the Joint Degree in Film Studies remain grounded in film: to introduce students to the construction of the image, the history of various national cinema movements, the shape of the international film industry, and the theoretical approaches that can be applied to film. However, our collaboration will also allow students to explore the interrelated fields of television, print, radio, and other media as aesthetic and cultural practices and forms. This study of contemporary and historical media will allow students to understand the way representation affects our understanding of gender, sexuality, national identity, racial and ethnic identities, and the influence of global markets and politics. All Film Studies majors in the joint program have the opportunity to work on an independent research project as part of their degree, either by writing a dissertation at St Andrews or by pursuing an Honors Thesis or Independent Study at William & Mary.

Requirements for the Joint Degree Program in Film Studies

Note: FMST is the prefix for courses at W&M; FM is the prefix for courses at St Andrews

Required Credit Hours:

A minimum of 58 credits toward the major, at least 21 of which are completed at William & Mary. At least 45 W&M / 180 StA credits must be completed in upper division courses in Years 3 and 4.

Major Computing Requirement

The major computing requirement is satisfied by FM 2002 at St Andrews or FMST 302 at W&M.

Major Writing Requirement:

A student who satisfies all requirements for the Film Studies major will also satisfy the Major Writing Requirement.

Core requirements:

All Film Studies majors in the joint program are required to take the following:

First Year

- At W&M, FMST 250 and FMST 310;
- At St Andrews, FM 1001 and FM 1002

Second Year

- At W&M, FMST 302 and 351 or 311 (new course);
- At St Andrews, FM 2001 and 2002

Distribution Requirements:

Some of these may be taken in Years 1 or 2, especially if these are courses at the 200-level; however, students must meet the requirement for 45/180 credits in upper division courses in Years 3 & 4, and must meet the Joint Programme Requirement for at least 90/22.5 courses taken at the ST Andrews level of 4000 or the equivalent at W&M:

- One course in a national cinema or a comparative course in global cinema (at W&M, all 3 credits): At W&M, FMST 330 or CHIN/JAPN 280; CHIN 320 or 360; FREN 310 or 393 (both taught in French); GRMN 220 or 424; HISP 320, 321, or 383; ITAL 310; JAPN 311 or 330; RUSS 309, 340, or 380; or at St Andrews, FM 4107, 4111, 4204, 4206, or 4207. May be repeated for credit when topics don't overlap.
- 2-3 W&M credits in a course on Media in Practice (that is, with a production component): FMST 370
- A research seminar at W&M: FMST 401
- In Year 4, a dissertation at St Andrews or an Honors thesis or Independent Study at W&M
- Additional elective credits to satisfy the total credit requirement of 45/180 credits in Honours level courses and 22.5/90 credits in courses numbered 4000 at St Andrews or the equivalent at W&M.
