

Learning Community Statement

As members of this course, we are committed to treating all participants with respect, in line with the William & Mary Statement of Values and the College of Arts & Sciences Statement of Academic Culture & Values. Our conversations may at times be challenging and difficult: we are here to learn, and learning is not always comfortable. If you strongly disagree with any specific reading or perspective, please remember to base your response on the factual strengths and weaknesses of the ideas presented and to refrain from personalizing any disagreements. If you have any concerns or questions, please feel free to approach me, or, if you prefer, you can use this link to submit them.