Family Weekend is quite a tradition at the College and we are so glad you are able to be with us for this year’s festivities. As you will see in looking over the schedule, an exciting array of activities awaits you!

Friday day highlights include visits to the Muscarelle Museum of Art and the opportunity to visit designated classes. Friday evening, we invite you to enjoy a joint performance by our Music Department ensembles at a special concert in William & Mary Hall. In addition, students are ready to lead you on lantern tours of the “Old Campus” and the historic Wren Yard (weather permitting). The William & Mary campus is always beautiful, but by lantern and candlelight it is even more so. The tours are always a Family Weekend favorite!

Saturday morning you are invited to sample academic life at William & Mary by attending one of our outstanding faculty lectures. Many of you have ordered tickets to attend the picnic lunch located in the Wren Yard where you can also enjoy live entertainment. After lunch, please join us at the picturesque Lake Matoaka Amphitheater for a very special performance—William & Mary SINGS!—a concert featuring the College’s talented and ever-popular student a capella ensembles. Saturday evening it will be time for us all to cheer on the Tribe as they take on Stony Brook at Zable Stadium.

With so many activities from which to choose, we hope you will create for yourselves a truly memorable weekend. Most importantly, enjoy the valuable time you will spend together with your William & Mary student!

Go Tribe!

See next page for descriptions.
Revising Longevity: Aging and Its Representation in the 1920s
Dr. Melanie Dawson, Associate Professor of English
Tucker Hall 127A
What does it mean to be old? What does middle age look like? Why doesn’t time affect everyone equally? Is it natural to attempt to turn back time and live as a young person again? This talk examines the desires and questions about aging from the early decades of the twentieth century, interrogating textual examples from the 1920s and from Edith Wharton’s oeuvre in particular. How Wharton and her contemporaries imagined older age (as well as the promises, innovations, and the controversies surrounding it) sheds light on demographic change in the early twentieth century as well as changes in health and longevity. Revisions of age in fiction, advertising, and film reveal a set of reinterpretations of aging that depict age’s cultural instability, its availability for manipulation, and a modern unsettlement of previous age-bound categories and associations.

What is Everything Made Of?
Dr. Joshua Erorh, Associate Professor of Physics
Washington Hall, Room 201
It is the goal of elementary particle physics to figure out the fundamental ingredients from which everything is made, and how those ingredients interact to give rise to the wonderful variety of phenomena that shape our universe. I will speak about what is known about the universe on the smallest and largest of scales, and how we know that our understanding is far from complete. I will also discuss some of the amazing research being performed by William & Mary scientists that is helping to solve the remaining puzzles in this field.

The value of undergraduate research in ‘basic’ biology: lessons from marine invertebrates
Dr. John Allen, Associate Professor of Biology
Integrated Science Center, Room 1127
One hallmark of William & Mary is our commitment to meaningful undergraduate research experiences. In my lab, these research experiences take the form of field and laboratory work to answer basic questions about how marine invertebrate animals work. In this talk, I’ll discuss whether the curiosity of myself and my students about how marine animals interact with their environment can be harnessed to address significant problems related to the conservation and restoration of marine habitats. Examples will take us from the Chesapeake Bay to the Great Barrier Reef and will assess the value of asking fundamental questions about how animals work.

Babies Born Behind Bars
Dr. Danielle Dallaire, Associate Professor of Psychology
Millington Hall, Room 150
The United States incarcerates more individuals than any other country in the world. As a consequence of mass incarceration policies, over two million children have an incarcerated parent, and increasingly, more and more children are born to women who are incarcerated. Professor Dallaire is the director of the William & Mary Healthy Beginnings Project, a research, referral, and educational program for pregnant incarcerated women. Professor Dallaire will discuss obstacles these women and their children face, as well as promising, evidence-informed residential and community-based programs which show positive impacts on the developmental trajectory of these children.

Movement as Communication
Dr. Leah Glenn, Associate Professor of Dance & Africana Studies
Andrews Hall, Room 101
This lecture will be an overview of the DANc 460 course. This particular course is an exploration of the many ways in which movement may be used as a means of communication. Participants will examine elements of dance technique, history and composition and investigate why people move/dance, how the expression of movement and its significance differ from one culture or group to the next and finally, take a look at its ability to inform, heal, validate and express who we are individually as well as collectively.
