

A Path to Involvement

There are over 450 student organizations at William & Mary and choosing the right one to join can often be overwhelming. Consider these reflection questions to help you navigate these important decisions! And then join us at the Student Organizations and Activities Fair the evening of Tuesday, August 23rd where many of these groups will be in attendance.

Questions for Reflection

- 1 What do you care about? (People, places, causes, events, trends, cultures, etc.)
- 2 What skills, knowledge, or insights do you want to develop?
- 3 What energizes you or restores your well-being?

Finding the Right Organization for You

A student should join an organization that brings meaning to them—that is, an organization that connects who they are and what they value.

For a full list of recognized student organizations, visit the website for the Office of Student Leadership Development at www.wm.edu/leadership.

Identify one organization or involvement area in each of these categories:

- Something you care about and want to continue with:
- Something you are interested in but have yet to try:
- Something that would advance your academic or professional interests:

Considering involvement through these categories can help you refine your choices!
