The Georgian Papers Programme

Launched on 1 April 2015 by Her Majesty The Queen, the Georgian Papers Programme is an ambitious project to transform access to the extensive collection of Georgian papers held in the Royal Archives and Royal Library at Windsor Castle. At the heart of the Programme is a partnership between the Royal Archives and Royal Library with King's College London. The Omohundro Institute of Early American History and Culture and the College of William & Mary are sharing in this work as primary Programme partners for the USA.

of the present moment, which involves in a rapid circulation of events the fate of Britain, ought not to permit a voice to be silent that was ever heard on public topics.

America is lost! Must we fall beneath the blow? Or have we resources that may repair the mischiefs of the late unfortunate contest? What are those resources? Should they be sought in distant regions held by a precarious tenure, or shall we seek them at home in the exertions of a new policy?

Here in few words is sketched the subject of these papers. The situation of the kingdom is novel—the policy that is to govern it must be novel like-guided the Administration of the British Government. It was thoroughly known that from every Country there always exists an active emigration of unfortunate People, who failing in their
